Workshop

Saturday:

April 17, 2010

9am - 4pm

About the Presenter:

John started making pots in high school outside of Chicago, Illinois. He then attended Ball State University where he studied with Marvin Reichle.

In 1968 John started the Bethel Pike Pottery with Allan Patrick. Four years later he started his own studio, The John Peterson Pottery, located north of Muncie, Indiana.

For four decades John has made a commitment to making well designed functional pots.

John sells his work through his studio, several galleries, and select craft shows.

Recent exhibitions:

- National Ceramics/Printmaking Invitational - Univ. of Saint Francis
- American Studio Ceramics - Ball State Univ.
- Dinner Works - Louisville Visual Arts Association

The WORKSHOP

Morning:

John will throw 5 or 6 different pots that he makes as part of his studio production. He will bring leather hard versions of the same pots to trim and decorate.

He would like to generate a discussion on how to support a studio and how to make a living over a long career.

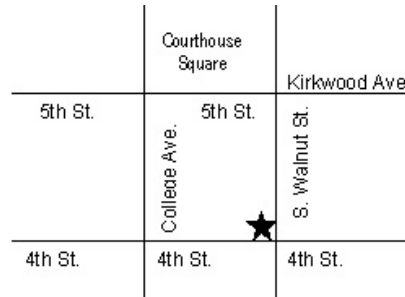

Afternoon:

John will demonstrate how he makes a slab tray and throw a large bowl.

For people who are interested, he will answer any questions or demonstrate techniques.

Location and Map:

The John Waldron Arts Center is located at the corner of 4th and South Walnut in the heart of downtown Bloomington.

Parking:

2 hour on-street parking is available surrounding the John Waldron Arts Center. Additional parking is available in the 4th Street Parking Garage directly across from the center for $.50 per hour.
